

10 places to go while they're still cheap

Christine Sarkis, SmarterTravel.com 11:34 a.m. EST February 20, 2014

Nicaragua: Every few years, a new Central American country gets crowned "the next Costa Rica" – meaning it's relatively safe and bursting with natural beauty, but it's not yet expensive and overrun with tourists. This year, Nicaragua is working hard to earn the title. Volcanoes, rainforests, rivers and Caribbean beaches lure travelers looking for off-the-beaten-path adventure on the cheap. Expect to be able to spend as little as $20 per day, or live the high life for not a whole lot more. Note that many see the recent constitutional amendment that removes term limits on the presidency as a potential threat to democracy, but it seems unlikely that there will be any immediate effect on travelers. (Photo: Getty Images/iStockphoto)

Find your island
SURROUND YOURSELF
WITH THE THINGS THAT MATTER MOST

THE BEACHES OF
FORT MYERS AND SANIBEL

FIND IT NOW

USA NOW

